All data received will be acknowledged and considered for a 2 year evaluation period. Where you as important as your big goals — and every month you can stick to your budget, you're one step closer to reaching them. When it comes to credit cards, add the minimum payment as an expense, but also include your total balance. Write down your salary, wages, tips, rent from a roommate and any other income you receive here. If you don't go back through your budget, you may find you forgot to cancel a fitness class you meant to cancel or overspent on eating out that month. Once you've listed everything, you'll be able to see how your income compares to your budget. Categorize Your Expenses Photo Courtesy: AJ Watt/Getty Images Once you have everything listed in your household budget form, it's time to categorize different expenses. At your check-in, you may find your savings account has grown nicely due to your automatic deposits. MORE FROM ASKMONEY.COM Start with the larger expenses, such as your rent or mortgage payment. The key is to find a budget template that works for you. Children, pets or loved ones you may be caring for also need their own categories — daycare fees, school tuition and Fluffy's monthly grooming are all expenses. Housing, transportation, utilities, health and fitness, entertainment, groceries, and personal care should all be accounted for in terms of categorization of spending. The key is to make sure it encompasses all your spending and it's organized in a way that makes you actually want to use it. If you're doing this process with a partner, ensure they have access as well. A budget works best if you follow through and use it to create a plan for the future. Focus on Your Goals Using a Household Budget Calculator Photo Courtesy: AleksandarNakic/Getty Images The main reason to have a household budget form is to help you reach your financial goals. If your budget is airtight already, that's great. A fixed expense is something like a mortgage payment or a student loan that won't change from month to month. Start by highlighting anything you think you can cut back on or remove.
