While it is important to learn the order of the planets, it is also useful to know some basic facts and features of each planet. Learning this material can help students understand differences and strengthen scientific concepts. Below are some general facts about the planets that children can benefit from learning: mercury: the closest planet to the sun, the orbital revolution of mercury around the sun lasts only 88 days of earth. even the smallest planet of the solar system (only slightly larger than the moon of the earth,) experiences extreme changes in night and day temperatures. venere: known as a gem of the earth, venere is relatively the same size of the earth and has mountains and volcanoes. its orbital revolution lasts 225 days of land. the planet has a dense and toxic atmosphere due to clouds of sulphuric acid, making it a greenhouse planet. veins rotate from east to west, in contrast to most other planets of the solar system. earth: the only habitable planet known in the solar system, the earth is a world of water, making it suitable for human life. It's our home planet. Mars: nicknamed "the red planet," mars has a surface similar to the desert. the dust of the planet is made of iron oxides, which give to mars its red signature shades. its orbital revolution lasts 687 days of land. because mars is in some way similar to the earth (with mountains, valleys and canyons,) scientists believe that mars may one day be able to sustain human life. in July 2018, scientists discovered proof of a liquid lake on the planet's suriace. Jupiter: the largest planet in the solar system, Thursday is a gas planet that is more than twice as much as the other combined planets, with an orbital rotation lasting over 11 yearsEarth, the planet has swirling clouds, including its famous large red dot. Finally, Jupiter has 75 swivel moons, making it as its solar system. Saturn: Saturn is the planet with rings. These rings consist of ice and rock, making the most unique planet than others. The orbital revolution of Saturn also lasts over 29 years of land. Uranus: Another unique planet, Uranus wheel from east to west like Venus. The orbital rotation of the planet lasts 84 years of the earth. The equator is at a right angle to the Al orbit, which means Uranus orbits on its side. It is estimated that another planet once collided with Uranus, causing the tilt. Neptune: The planet is known to have violent windstorms. With a 165-year orbital rotation of the Earth, Neptune was the only planet discovered through the mathematics of astronomy before being detected by telescopes and satellites. The planets are fascinating and can be easily remembered with the help of funny rhymes and sayings. Which ones should they use to start? The AABB rhyme scheme uses sections of four lines divided into two pairs. A pair is composed of two lines that replicate each other. The series of pairs continues for the rest of the poem. With the AABB rhyme scheme, every rhyme. So, you have two rows spinning (A) followed by two rows sharing a different rhyme (B). An Example of an AABB Poem Under the Sun After Lots of Fun A Cute Cat Wore a Small Hat This poem evokes the words "sun" and "fun" as part of Scheme A. It resonates "cat" and "hat" as part of Scheme B. Poems Using AABB Castor Scheme Many popular poems use the AABB rhyme scheme. "Good Timber" by Douglas Malloch uses the pattern. In the poem, Malloch evokes the words "fight" and "light" for Model A. Replace "molation" and "rain" for Model B. In "Sick," Shel Silverstein evokes "today" and "McKay." Then it rhymes with "mumps" and "bumps." These four lines of the poem set the tone and structure for the rest of the piece. Perhaps one of the most famous uses of the AABB rhyme is the poem "Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star." This poem evokes "star" and "are" for Model A and "high" and "sky" for Model B. Using AABB in Other Modules Poems are not the only places where you can find an AABB rhyme system. You'll also see the pattern used in the songs. The prose can also use a rhyme scheme. You can also see AABB used together with other rhyme schemes and patterns. Other rhyme schemes There are many other rhyme schemes. Some are more common than the AABB rhyme scheme. For example, many people like to write poetry in free verse. Free verse usually doesn't have a specific rhyme. That makes it an informal verse. Formal verses have rhyme patterns. Haiku is another rhyme scheme. He's from Japan. A haiku contains three lines. The first line has five syllables. The second line has seven syllables. The third line has five syllables. Shakespeare used several rhyme schemes in his sonnets. Shakespearean sonnetons use a pattern reminiscent of ABAB, CDCD, EFEF, GG. Other poems use an alternate rhyme. It's an ABAB rhyme pattern. The rhyme scheme would go ABAB CDCD EFEF GHGH. Balls often use this type of pattern. A triplet uses the same rhyme at the end of each line. The rhyme scheme is three lines that make AAA rhyme. A longer poem that uses the same rhyme at the end of each line called monorithms. A closed rhyme uses the ABBA scheme. It's also called a rhyme sandwich. Finally, a soccer table uses five lines. The rhyme scheme is AABBA. These types of They're from Ireland. While there are many other kinds of rhyme patterns, these are among the most popular options found in today's literature.
