We will state everything you need to know about billing addresses, how they differ from your shipping address, why they are important, and also how to change yours if you move. Chances are that you have been asked to provide your billing address when signing up for a new credit or debit card. In many cases, it will be the same as your permanent address â€“ your home or apartment - unless you decide to use the address of your CFO or another alternative permanent address. Photo courtesy: The Good Brigade / Getty Images whenever a form or a business requires your "address", "referring to the associated address card or to the account. That said, if you want your transaction to go through properly, it's important to check your information and include everything from your apartment number to your zip zip Is this an billing address used for?First and perhaps more obviously, your billing address is where all invoices, account statements, or other information associated with your account will be sent. But your billing address also plays an important role when it comes to protecting your card from fraud. Photo Courtesy: simonkr/Getty Images Did you ever wonder why © are you asked for the postal code of your card when you check out online? This is because of something called the Address Verification System (AVS). Each time you enter your postal code at the time of the checkout, the trader's ACP will compare it with what your card has in the archive to make sure it matches. While you should always contact the broadcaster as soon as you notice you have lost your card or stolen it, AVS acts as a deterrent for thieves who might try to use it to make fraudulent purchases. How to find your billing address Can't you remember which billing address you used to sign for a specific card? Or maybe you just moved in recently and you can't remember if your billing address is your new address or the old one? Rest assured: your billing address tends to be quite easy to understand.Photo Courtesy: andresr/Getty Images Your first option is to call your issuer directly and explain your situation to customer service. As long as you can check the address you used, they will understand if you accidentally guess your old address. Alternatively, if you are receiving communications from the company in question, then your billing address is the one you are receiving the mail to. It should also be available on your account statements, which you can check online. Example of billing address An billing address usually comes in the following format:Your name 1234 Street NameApt. (if applicable) City, State, Postal Code Photo Courtesy: PeopleImages/Getty Images Most of the applications that ask you to enter your billing address are quite clear with regard to the provision of the appropriate boxes. Just-Just- Make sure you fill it out correctly and always read it again before sending it.Why does billing address matter?As mentioned above, your billing address is not only the place where you will receive important correspondence on your account, but also an important part of protecting you from identity fraud. AVS is used not only in brick and mortar stores, but also when you shop online. Photo Courtesy: Maskot/Getty Images Indeed, sometimes online address verification systems take even more information into account. Some might try to match the entire billing address to the one you have on file, while others might check items such as the street number of the billing address your issuer has on file.This helps eliminate the anonymity of online purchases in the event of fraudulent purchases. Let's say, for example, that a thief steals your credit card and tries to have a big purchase shipped to them. Unless they know your billing address, it is unlikely that your purchase will be successful. Even if they did, it's usually quite simple to prove that such a transaction was fraudulent by asking the sender to verify the shipping address with all of your known residences.Difference between billing address and shipping addressIf you also use your principal residence as your billing address, it is likely that this location will also serve as your shipping address. But what if you want to buy a gift online and send it to a friend or family member? Photo Courtesy: Elva Etienne/Getty Images In these cases, you will need to fill in the billing and shipping address separately. To make sure your purchase is successful, you'll need to make sure you enter your billing address "anything related to your form of purchase." And the shipping address Â«WHERE YOU WANT THE GIFT CAN SHIPPEDÂ». This is also an important distinction to make regularly if you do not use your main residence as a billing address. For example, if you use a one box as billing address, we recommend that you enter your physical address if you want the parcel to be delivered there. How to change or update your billing addressEvery time you move, make sure that updating your billing address is on your to-do list on the move. We recommend that you make it something you do for every card and account you have.Â» Photo Courtesy: Carlina Teteris/Getty Images Fortunately, changing your billing address isnât a big deal. Some of the easiest ways to do this are:Sign in to your online account, extract your information and simply change the billing address on your profile. Call the issuer, whose number is usually on the back of the card or bank statement, and ask for a change of billing address. If you ship in your payments, then you can usually request a change of billing address on the back of your payment coupon when you ship it in. MORE FROM ASKMONEY.COM ASKMONEY.COM
