Choose the right class and the race combo for you is completely subjective; It's simply to you. You have to understand what kind of role you want to fill when you play Classic World of Warcraft. Are you going to support other players curing them? Do you prefer to protect others being the main tank that takes maximum incoming damage? Or do you just want to impose tons of damages from afar? When you invent a reply to those questions, you could choose an adaptation class and a race. In the end, everything is reduced to your personal preferences and play game. And with what is being said, it is probably better to choose your class first and then see which races are available. Collecting, there is no doubt that your choice of wow the combination of breed and classical class will influence your game as Some combos simply work better than others. That is just like the vanilla works and actually has the gameplay-wise game as you need to choose your race and your class for the most optimal performance of the final game. However, if you are more than an informal player and you just like to enjoy the game, then feel free to choose any breed and class you want. So what is your combination of favorite race / class in the classic Oh? Release your answer in the comments below! Image via Blizzard Entertainment World of Warcraft First expansion, the crusade turned on, not only represented an extension of zones and raids, but also meant the introduction of new races. While all the races available in the Warcraft vanilla world is Remained playable when the TB is started, there were two more added by Blizzard Entertainment. The blood elf became a playable race for Horde members, and the Draenei was added to the Alliance. One of the primary reasons for these tender additions was also introduced the expansion of class selection for each faction. While no class was added to the TBC game, the classes previously available only for a faction have become an option for other blood elves could be Paladini, a class that was previously exclusive for the alliance. Draenei could be shamans, a previously exclusive class for the horde. When the WOW Classic TBC pre-patch starts by the end of the year, players can start creating blood elves and Draenei characters in preparation for TBC launch. While this option was not available when the game originally came out at half of the 2000s, he said Blizzard during BlizzConline, he would excentious players to create a blood elf or Draenei too if those breeds are not available until the game is State officially launched. By allowing players playing blood and Draenei elves in pre-patch, which has no official launch time yet, Blizzard is giving people the possibility of reaching level 60 before the TBC launch so that they can walk through the Dark portal at the same time of all their friends who have leveled in classic.
