Intoxication means the condition of having physical or mental control noticeably diminished by the effects of alcohol or drugs. Here are some steps to help determine if a person is intoxicated.Physical Signs of IntoxicationLook for glassy or bloodshot eyes. Also look for droopy eyes or if someone clearly has difficulty keeping their eyes open.Notice how the person smells. If you notice that the person's breath or clothes smell of alcohol, this may be an effective tell-tale sign of intoxication.Watch for impaired motor function. Intoxicated people can't perform normal tasks in the same way they would if they were sober. If someone is having trouble walking in a straight line or is fumbling with objects, this may be a sign that they are intoxicated.Signs of Behavioral IntoxicationLook for a person's inhibitions becoming lowered. Some people who are visibly intoxicated exhibit louder behavior than usual or may make inappropriate comments.Watch out for a person that is slurring their speech.Notice if someone is speaking slower or faster than usual.What locations are restricted for alcohol delivery?DO NOT, under any circumstances, deliver alcohol to the following locations:Public or private school (K-12) (e.g. an elementary school);College campus (e.g. dormitories, other on-campus housing);Prison, reformatory, veterans' home, or state capitol grounds;Locker or similar package storage service (e.g. a storage facility); orBusinesses that sell alcohol (e.g. liquor stores, bars).Can I be held liable if I deliver to a minor, an intoxicated person, or to a restricted location?Yes. All parties involved in a transaction - the store, Gopuff and you, personally - can all be held liable in the event of an impermissible delivery.It is your right to refuse a delivery, and you should always do so if:The customer does not have an IDThe customer is under the age of 21The customer does not match the person in the IDThere are other visible issues with the IDThe ID scan is invalid or rejected in the scanning processThe customer is visibly intoxicatedYou will still receive your base pay for orders that you are unable to deliver based on these circumstances.
