Home Media Favorites Menu Similar Threads - Text Message Character The text message length calculator is a simple tool that can tell you many things about a text message, such as the number of characters, type of characters used, text message cost and more. Here's how to use it: Step #1: Copy and paste or write in your text message. You can also choose one of the available templates. Step #2: Choose one of the available options for the "From" field to see how the SMS message will look on a customer's phone. Step #3: On the right side of the screen, select the destination country for your SMS message. There are several reasons why you should use our text message character counter tool: Count the number of characters in your text message. This may sound redundant, given the name of the tool, but not all characters are created equal. As you know, the standard length for text messages is 160, but using the Unicode charset will decrease this length to 70 characters. In addition, certain characters from the GSM 03.38 charset require 'escape characters'. These escape characters take up two characters (14 bits) to encode. So, even if you have 160 GSM characters, the message may be split if it contains one such symbol. Estimate text message cost. On the right side of the screen, you will also see a 'text message cost' tool that allows you to choose the country to which the SMS will be sent. This will automatically calculate the cost of your text message. See a preview of your text message on different mobile devices. The character counter tool also has a preview option that will show you how the text message will be displayed on Apple devices, Android devices and regular cellular phones. Examine the 'detailed view' of your text message. With the help of the detailed view, you can investigate the nature of the characters used. Regular GSM characters are displayed in grey, non-GSM characters that force the text into Unicode encoding are highlighted in red and GSM characters that are encoded as Unicode symbols are highlighted in yellow. The detailed view gives you more control over text messages, as well as the possibility to change or edit symbols that add to your character count. We believe that formatting is extremely important in business text messaging. An SMS message that is split, incomplete or ill formatted may discourage a customer from taking action. We built the text character counter tool to help our visitors examine, not only the length of their text messages, but also the types of characters used and the way that the text will be displayed on different mobile devices. The SMS character count tool will give you more control over your text messages. Here are the main benefits of using our tool: Quickly determine the number of characters in your text messages. Find out into how many parts a text message will be segmented. Identify GSM characters, Unicode characters and GSM characters that use Unicode encoding. See a preview of your text message as it will look on Apple, Android and regular mobile devices. Estimate the cost of sending a text message to different countries. Edit characters that take up space to avoid SMS segmentation. Using the detailed view of our online character count tool, you can identify symbols that are taking up too much space in your text message. The best way to reduce the length of an SMS message is to replace such characters (usually Unicode characters, GSM characters that require Unicode encoding or escape characters) with a GSM equivalent. GSM Charset: The GSM 03.38 charset is the standard character set for text messaging on GSM-based cell phones. All GSM handsets and network elements support the GSM 7-bit alphabet. The basic GSM charset contains the letters A to Z (uppercase and lowercase), numbers, special symbols and several symbols from the Greek alphabet. @ A SP 0 / P ç P E 1 1 A Q a q $ Φ " 2 B R b ¥ Γ # 3 C S c s è A x 4 D T t é Ω % 5 E U e u ü Ì & 6 F V f v ¡ ¨ 7 G W w ó Z (8 H X h x Ç Ø) 9 I Y i Y LF E * , j Z j z Ø ESC + , K Å k å ð Ë , < L Ó l ó Escape Characters: Some characters in the GSM 03.38 extension table can only be used at the cost of two characters. The GSM charset uses 7-bit alphabet encoding, but the escape characters require 14 bits to encode, thus taking up two characters. These symbols are: | ^ , { } , € [~ ,] and \. Unicode Symbols: Unicode is a standard for encoding, handling and representing the text expressed in many of the world's writing systems. The latest list of Unicode symbols contains over 120,000 characters from multiple symbol sets and 129 historic and modern scripts. Unicode Encoding: Compared to the GSM charset, Unicode encoding supports a huge range of languages and symbols. However, if your text message contains a symbol that isn't in the 7-bit alphabet, UCS-2 encoding must be used. This type of encoding takes up a lot of space, thus reducing the number of characters allowed in a message to 70. I recently updated to Jelly Bean on my Galaxy SII Skyrocket and among other issues, I am trying to fix how many characters I can have in one text message. It used to be that you can type like 140 characters per message. After the update, it only allows 70 characters per message and is constantly sending people multiple messages that only have a few words in them. Does anyone know if there is a way to change this. I often text people that do not have unlimited texts and this is causing a major issue. PLEASE HELP!! 04-24-2013 01:35 PM Like 0 An SMS is 160 characters long counting spaces and periods and such. Having said that I don't see how you can be down to 70 even with a software update. I would check again and make sure you are counting everything. On my phone if SMS it tells me the character count. 04-24-2013 01:57 PM Like 0 It tells me 70 characters. for example, it might say 70/1 when there is nothing in the text box. It used to tell me 160/1 for the same thing. It just changed with the update. 04-24-2013 02:19 PM Like 0 I actually just figured it out!!! Then select automatic 07-06-2015 12:01 AM Like 0 Even with the rise of online messengers that you can use to chat with someone for free, sending a text message remains one of the fastest ways to reach someone on their phone. What if the text you want to send isn't urgent, and you intentionally want to postpone sending it? What if you don't want to forget wishing someone a happy birthday the next day or need to reach someone in a different time zone and don't want to wake them up with a text? On Android, there are several ways to schedule a text message to be sent at a later time or date. Learn how to use your native Messages app, Google Messages, or a third-party app to schedule a text message to be sent in the future. How to Schedule a Text Message on Android in Your Native Messages App So you wrote a text but decided to send it another time. The good news is, you can schedule and send your message later, no matter what Android device you have. However, depending on your model, you'll either need to use a third-party app to do it or not. For example, if you have a Samsung phone, you can use your native Messages app called Samsung Messages to schedule your texts. To do that, follow the steps below. Open the Samsung Messages app, find the contact you want to message, and write down your text.Select the arrow icon on the left side of the text, then select the plus icon to reveal additional options. From the options, select Schedule message. Choose the time and date when you want your message to be sent. Select Done to confirm. To finish scheduling your message, select Send. How to Schedule a Text Message Using Google Messages On many models of Android smartphones, Google Messages is the native Messages app. If that's the case, scheduling text messages on Android becomes even easier. To schedule a text message in Google Messages, follow the steps below. Open Google Messages and type your text.Hold down the Send button until the Scheduled send option appears and select it. Pick a date and time when you want the text to be sent. Select Send to confirm. The button will now display a little clock icon that means your message is scheduled. What to Do if You Can't Schedule a Text in Google Messages If you opened your native Messages app and didn't find the Scheduled send option, it could mean one of the two things. Your native Messages app is different from Google Messages, in which case you can simply download and install Google Messages to make it work. Alternatively, the feature may not have rolled out for you yet. You can either wait for the update to reach you or find Google Messages on the Play Store and join the beta program on the product page. The beta version of the app will include the feature. Use Third-Party Apps to Schedule a Text Message on Android You can also use a third-party app to be able to schedule your text messages as well as use other workarounds. Use Pulse SMS to Postpone Your Text Messages If you don't like using Google Messages, Pulse SMS is a good alternative. The Pulse SMS logo even looks similar to that of Google Messages. Naturally, the process of scheduling a text in Pulse SMS mimics Google Messages too. After you download and install the app, open it and select the plus icon in the bottom-right corner of the app. Choose the contact that you want to send a text to. Then, hold down the Send button on the right until you see the option to schedule the text. Select the date and time when you want your message sent and select OK. Write down your message and select Save. Pulse SMS will send it on a day and time that you chose. Schedule Your Texts Using Do It Later Do It Later sounds like an app for procrastination, but it's an app for automating your messages. Aside from scheduling your emails and text messages to be sent later, Do It Later allows you to automatically reply to calls, texts, WhatsApp messages, and even emails. To schedule a text in Do It Later, open the app, select the plus icon in the bottom-right corner of your screen, then choose Message. Next, add the recipient, write down your message and select when you want the app to send it. To confirm, select the tick icon in the upper-right corner of the screen. Do It Later will take care of the rest for you. Write Down Now, Send Later Writing down a thought when it crosses your mind always helps to remember it later. The same is true for text messages. So write down your message the minute you think about it, and if it doesn't seem like the right time to send it, schedule it to be sent later. Do you schedule your texts on Android? Which app do you use for it? Share your experience with postponing texts in the comments section below.
